In the late 18th century, the Marquise of Alorna - a fearless, brilliant poet - rises from a Lisbon convent to the heart of the Viennese court. Caught between love, power, and the pursuit of freedom, she endures personal loss and political persecution while using art, literature, travel, and diplomacy to challenge the established order. As her influence at court grows, she found a secret society dedicated to expanding women's roles, revealing herself as a visionary far ahead of her time.
